

Some say that looks are the most important thing when choosing somebody to date
But others say that its humor, or compassion, or even smarts
Its not rocket science, but some say that its an Educational process, that it takes skill to know who is right for you and who is left
Its not supposed to be hard to find somebody to love, somebody to hold Someone to accept you for who you are, yet some think that choosing the right one takes Talent, but in actuality all you need is the will to keep going
The will to keep on looking after days, weeks, even months of trying to find Mr. Right and not
Mr. Left
It can sometimes be compared as if it were a senior in highschool trying to Search for their perfect major going into college
When they think that they've finally found the one they suddenly have a change of heart and are all back to square one
Starting over, it's easy they said, trying to find the perfect person for you all over again isn't easy
But you have to do it, time and time again just because you have to experience heartbreak to learn the meaning of love